The Pope's Jubilee.

Rome, January 6.—The pope has announced that he will receive presidents of the Catholic societies of Rome and British pilgrims on the ninth instant. The pope's jubilee presents, now placed on exhibition at the Vatican, are magnificent. Foreign diplomatists, a number of Roman aristocrats and a host of other guests were present. The pope entered the hall where the presents had been arranged at noon, followed by forty cardinals and the pontifical court. Cardinal Serafino read an address, to which the pope replied. His soul was excited by the manifestations of veneration reaching him from all parts of the world. He regarded them as evidence of the power of the papacy, which the enemies of the church vainly attempted to deny. The share taken by the sovereigns of the world in the jubilee proved that they justly appreciated the importance of the [illegible]. He concluded by praising the organizers of the exhibition.

George Herman Kautler, formerly head of the political army, is dead.

The Turf.

Chicago, January 6.—A suit for $250,000 was begun in the superior court here to-day by the Horn Silver Mining company against one of the directors, Augustus D. Bryant, who lives in this city. This is one of a number of suits, all the rest of which were begun in New York against directors there, to make the company's directory responsible for a defalcation of $600,000 by Charles H. Francklyn, former president of the company, and one Brown, who was vice president. Francklyn was General agent of the Cunard steamship company, and his shortcomings in the transactions with which he was connected were reported in New York dispatches some weeks ago to be nearly a million. The directors under the bylaws of the mining company which was Utah corporation are liable for the acts of the officers elected by them.

Nogales, Ariz., January 6.—Information of the killing of Eraclio Bernal, the famous Mexican bandit, is just received. Bernal and a portion of his followers had a desperate fight yesterday near the town of Cosala, Sinaloa with Mexican troops, in which Bernal killed his brother and three or four followers. The captured bandits and the [illegible] taken to Cosala, where they are at present. The captives are lodged in the jail at Cosala. The fight was short, but [illegible] desperate. No further particulars are obtainable as the government troops are hurrying on for the transportation of the prisoners.

Roads for the New Year.

Philadelphia, January 6.—Responses to circulars of Grand Secretary Litchman, issued to local assemblies of Knights of Labor of the assessment of January 1st, are pouring into the offices of the order. Secretary Litchman says the situation is excellent. "We have nearly 700 members now, and all in good standing. We are ready for the New Year under the very brightest of prospects."

Railroad Employes' Relief.

Denver, January 6.—A certificate of incorporation of the D. & R. G. Railroad Company Employes Relief association is granted for the purpose of creating a common fund by the payment of monthly dues by the members for hospital purposes, was filed to-day. The incorporators are C. H. Hill, Wm. W. McLellan, Charles A. Boring, John Sweeney, J. L. Thompson, J. M. Tilson and S. O. Snyder.

A Union Depot Burned.

Anderson, Ky., January 6.—The [illegible] was totally destroyed by fire this afternoon. The upper story of the building was occupied as a hotel. All the depot and hotel furniture was saved. Loss about $125,000; insurance, $75,000.

A Noble Actor.

Minneapolis, January 6.—The comedian Lotus Kinkaid has just been notified by New York attorneys of the successful issue of a law suit by which he comes into possession of a valuable estate in France and becomes the Count de Carteret de Lobas.

A Suit Decided.

Philadelphia, January 6.—A provisional committee of the anti-Administration Knights of Labor has decided to begin suit in county against several of the heads of the order for an accounting of funds and to determine whether any of the officers have been guilty of criminal acts.

Supreme Court Decisions.

Denver, January 6.—In the United States court to-day, Henry et al. vs. the Travelers Insurance company, bill for injunction, the petition of complainant for leave to file supplemental bill was denied with leave to renew the same.

Funeral of a War Governor.

Fort Hopkins, N. J., January 6.—The funeral of ex-Governor Parker took place this morning from the Presbyterian church. A large assemblage of distinguished citizens of the state and nation were present.

Manager of the GAZETTE.

The friends of silver need have little fear of any adverse legislation during the present session of congress. Mr. Bland's retention as chairman of the committee on coinage, weights and measures shows that the silver men still have a majority in the lower house.

Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, is in favor of making the proceedings of the executive sessions of the senate public. There is no reason why the country should not know how a greater part of the senate's business is transacted. The executive session gives senators a splendid opportunity to evade responsibilities which should be met in an open and straightforward manner.

Some very elaborate statistics have lately been published by the Charleston News and Courier, which furnish a comparison between what it is claimed to term the slave and white labor periods. These statistics show that the total investment of the people of South Carolina from the various industries in the state were in 1880 $54,000,000, and in 1890 $102,000,000. This increase is nearly twice as great as the growth of the population of the state. It certainly speaks well for the industries of the laboring classes which has been so marked a one, though the south during the past few years.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the representative of Great Britain in the Behring sea conference regarding the Canadian fisheries, recently delivered a speech at the annual dinner of the Toronto board of trade. In the course of his remarks he expressed the hope that he might be able to [illegible] of the glorious traditions and [illegible] of his country. He referred to the United States as a foreign power. He urged good neighborliness with the great republic which was divided from Canada by only an invisible boundary line. Any quarrel which might exist between Canada and the United States ought to be dealt with as between friends. He considered that the principle of impartial dealings with the United States at present obtained was more satisfactory than at the present time. Mr. Chamberlain was enthusiastically applauded during the delivery of his speech. The cordial sentiments which he expressed can be fully endorsed by all fair minded citizens. His remarks show that he is keenly alive to the importance of existing relations between the two countries, and also of the importance of an amicable settlement of the fisheries dispute.

If the [illegible] may be [illegible] the house committee on privileges and elections by the contest for Mr. Breckenridge who is contesting Mr. Carlisle's seat are true, they place the speaker in a very unenviable light. The methods which it is alleged the democrats pursued in order to elect Mr. Carlisle, bear a striking resemblance to the ballot box stuffing and tissue ballot schemes which prevailed in some of the southern states ten or twelve years ago. If the charges made by the contestant are borne out by the facts the democrats will be placed in a very awkward dilemma. Ever since the contest for Mr Carlisle's seat was commenced they have treated it with comparative indifference, and Mr. Carlisle himself, by his failure to appear before the committee, virtually acknowledges that the contest is not worthy of his concern. If Thorbe can show that he was rightfully elected, and is not seated, it will compel the democrats to be responsible for the methods by which Mr. Carlisle obtained his seat. Mr. Carlisle is a very able representative and if the public estimate of his character is correct, he should be the last man to occupy an office to which he was not entitled.

Mr Gladstone recently celebrated his seventy eighth birthday. The speech which he delivered at Dover a short time ago shows him to be possessed of all the fire and vigor of men twenty years younger than himself. He made a profound impression and appeared as bold and courageous as in the days of his sharp encounters with Disraeli. In speaking of Mr. Gladstone's speech, the Chicago Tribune said:

"The year just closed has been on the whole a year of progress for his party and the principles and measures to which he has pledged himself. During the year the liberals have won four seats from the tories and lost none and have reduced the tory majorities in every constituency in which a contest occurred. In addition to these gains eight members of parliament who seceded from the Gladstone liberal party with Chamberlain and Harrington have returned to their former allegiance. So also has Sir George Trevelyan who was one of the team irate [illegible] a year ago. These gains count twenty four in a division in the house of commons so that the tory mongrel party, which could muster a majority of 104 at the opening of the last session of parliament cannot muster a majority to exceed 80 at the opening of the next session. This reduced majority is likely to be still further diminished soon after parliament meets when the [illegible] the ministerial changes and on the resignation of Mr. Evelyn the tory member of parliament for Deptford on account of the coercion policy of the government, take place.

Mr Cleave Down the Aisle.

Burnette in the Judge.

Watch the old lady leave the car. She has her basket, her bag, her bird cage and her umbrella. With her basket she can push a man clear over the back of a car seat. With her bag she can slap his hat over his eyes without looking at him. With her bird cage she can muss the hair of any woman whom she passes. And with her umbrella she can stab people before in the back and put out the eyes of people behind her. The cars pull up to leave the car by the front door. But only one or two people seem to be going that way, and turning her head she sees a lot of people crowding into the car by the rear door. Instantly it occurs to her that a route so popular must certainly be the best. She turns and charges down the aisle. The incoming passengers, coveting earnestly the best seats, struggle fiercely to reach them. The old lady, fixing her piercing eyes upon the rear door, makes way for liberty and egress. The people cry out. The conductor swears. And the old lady wonders why they don't go the way the people pass there. It flashes upon her with the force of a revelation. It is only to get her out of that lonely end of the car which four masked men with timbered incers are waiting to rob and murder, and then whisk her off into a gay retreating gayety. She remembers how seeing the conductor go out at the door and budging her to follow him. He is in league with the robbers. She, with [illegible] and plunges through the moaning procession, leaving a chaotic wreck of raiment and baggage in her wake and reaches the door. [illegible] With a triumphant glare at the baffled conductor, who has come into the car to look for her, the dear old soul backs down the car steps, hangs on to the hand-rail, and, reaching down and out with one foot, feels around for the planet we inhabit. Finding the globe at last she taps it cautiously with her foot once or twice, to make sure that it is there and will not suddenly shoot away into space as she comes down, and so descends, stands safely on the platform, and in her blessed old heart gives grateful thanks for safe deliverance, and carries her sweet old face, her many bundles, and her capacious pockets up to some home that will lose three-fifths of its sunshine when grandma makes her last journey and is received without a bundle or package, a trouble or a fear, by the angels who must sometimes grow a little impatient waiting for her.

An Unpublished Letter by Whittier.

Haverhill Bulletin.

In 1853, according to the recently published reminiscences of Mrs. Priscilla Webster Page of Washington, D. C., she was attending the Cony Female academy at Augusta, Me. In that year there came to Augusta for a summer a Mrs. Nucina, who established herself at the academy boarding house as a teacher of music. She produced an autograph album which was somewhat a curiosity in its way. Among its contents was a poem written, as she said, by a very prosy, awkward young man who boarded in the same house with her, and at whom she was in the habit of poking fun rather mercilessly. The evening before leaving her Boston boarding home she gave him her album requesting a slip from his pen upon which he inscribed the following lines, which it is believed, have never been published. Mrs. Page, at the author of the "Rebuke," then a young lady of 16, wrote them out, and the poem is described from her neat little copy:

[illegible] God bless thee!
[illegible]
May the devil be [illegible]
May the wide world use thee well

[illegible]
And then not a tear;
The world, for one shall never
Leave the thy leaving here.

[illegible]
A few or as they are!
And [illegible] will [illegible] thee
Who do not wish to part

"As they mix thy [illegible] laughter,
As the [illegible] bosom rest,
And the [illegible] which followed after
Thy [illegible] silence

"Then will the Lord be near thee!
In the [illegible] hour,
And the [illegible] fear thee,
As thy Quaker friend hath done.

"Pray of [illegible] to thine vexation,
Thy heart be in [illegible] low,
And in the final [illegible]
May the devil seize his due.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

A Spectacular Mexican Torreador.

The Most Famous Bull-Fighter in the World.

The talking of bull-fights, one soon becomes hardened to this sort of thing in Mexico, and even to relish the excitement, but when the promoter of the cruel sport is a woman, as is not unfrequently the case, there is something so revoltingly unnatural about it that the most sophistical American turns away in disgust. It was my fortune, some time ago to see Señorita Hernandez, the most famous female bull-fighter in the world. So fearfully exciting was the so-called "sport" that the 5,000 people in the Plaza de Toros were upon their feet in a state of wildest confusion, men yelling themselves hoarse and women fainted—all [illegible] a slender young girl had nerve enough to throw herself in the path of a fierce bull and kill him by a single thrust. It was her farewell performance, and the greatest and heroic [illegible] in the country had been advertised for. To make the novelty greater, it was announced that Señorita Hernandez would ride upon stilts, armed only with a short sword, and with none of the usual defenses and loopholes of retreat to which every one it was [illegible] of all to the brave girl. The animals provided were small, active, and wildly untamed and the horns of each were trimmed and polished till the points were bright as needles and almost as sharp.

Never did veteran peculiar perform more expertly than she could, executed by the youthful [illegible] [illegible] and water carrier would make his [illegible] charge, she stood perfectly still until he had approached within [illegible] feet, when—and here spectators said the animal rushed by with [illegible] she would slap him in the face with the cape cloak which he first presented to her, and with the other hand deftly [illegible] into the neck a [illegible] and cruel [illegible] whose sharp [illegible] [illegible] Each [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
